

She is amazing giving a voice to the silenced telling our stories as we beg the world for justice or understanding never judging ~~but~~ ~~but~~ letting the truth show its self in her presence. she does not judge or condemn though I am sure she has her own thoughts she realises that its about ours because we have to live with ourselves after this, I can't tell you what she gave me because I don't know what it is. don't mistake we'd notice if it was gone but it was introduced so slowly so gently it is not imposing. like so little in my life I can sit with it. It does no harm it has not wounded me it impacts so little and so much at once. it is good. positive not toxic and this is what she gives so freely I wonder if she knows? it is a cool still water a breath of air. clean water when you're thirsty. we give her our stories and she gives us something that is unwritten it can't be expressed in any language. ~~As she goes~~ but this amazing person as I am sure you have begun to expect has a story of her own you may stumble upon it maybe her lips gave it up to you or maybe you have eagerly awaited it waiting for the words to spill ~~off~~ over you so you can wonder at the chain of events that ~~she~~ created this wonderful person, and that's on the author cause if I read the book before I wrote this my praises for the book might spill out and I wanted to voice the brilliance of the woman whose story this is, because the energy she possesses as a person is surely reflected in her story and would seep into any evaluation of her. I am glad now that I wrote about the author before the book because in knowing her brilliance you will be able to see how amazing it is that this book came into being. A book she calls her treasure. the book in my room speaks so many truths. It addresses many issues that are unsavory but she does not offend