

Boo who?

Caught a glimpse of the Logie Awards on TV recently - or should I say, the female decapitation ceremony.

How sad that actors have lost their identities to fashion designers. How sad that reporters can think of nothing more to ask than;

“ . . .and who are you wearing tonight?”

I didn't 'stay tuned' long enough to see if men were being asked who they were wearing. Perhaps they were asked; “ . . .who's the dress hanging off your arm tonight?”

Let's hope next year some of the celebrities will dig their stiletto heels in and refuse to engage in this dress flogging, identity stripping trend. In doing so, they'd be setting a better example for the young fans who look up to them as individuals, not objects in designer dresses.