

"Life is mostly
froth and bubble.
Two things stand
like stone -
kindness in another's
trouble - courage in your own."

"The mature conscience of the postwar generation globally dropped do-gooding in favour of analysis and insight into social and political structures that maintain inequality and generate injustice.

Kindness did not fit into analysis. ~~xxx~~
~~xxx~~ Being kind was for animals, children, the elderly, yourself even, and maybe the environment. Kindness was too banal for the big social issues. Kindness was for private, personal actions. Yet one of the major social movements of the second half of the 20th century fought fiercely for recognition that the personal is political. So is it time for a new kind of kindness ? "

Barbara Dinham, Director, Pesticide Action Network, UK. From book 'A Revolution In Kindness' edited by Anita Roddick (Body Shop). The 'froth and bubble' quote was written in her autograph book by her Father. Pic ~~xx~~ of my tagged copy of the book - my bible.
